Demokritos

The National Center for Scientific Research "Demokritos" (NCSR "Demokritos") is the largest multidisciplinary research center in Greece, with critical mass in expertise and infrastructure in the fields of Nanotechnology, Energy & Environment, Biosciences, Particle and Nuclear Science, Informatics and Telecommunications.

The Center was inaugurated in 1961 as a state-owned entity under the name Nuclear Research Center "Demokritos", following the operation of the nuclear reactor research facility. The development of the nuclear reactor introduced a cutting-edge technology to Greece, signifying a major turning point in the development of large-scale research infrastructures and the first step towards the establishment of a national Research and Technology policy. After 50 years of operation, "Demokritos" remains a point of reference as a successful example of a multidisciplinary research center in Greece.

In 1985, it was renamed as the National Center for Scientific Research "Demokritos" and became an autonomous Legal Entity of Public Law and supervised by the General Secretariat for Research and Technology (GSRT), while preserving its administrative and financial independence. NCSR "Demokritos" conducts world-class basic and applied research for advancing scientific knowledge and promoting technological development in selected areas of national socio-economic interest. The Center also plays an important role in education and professional training. Its unique infrastructure is used for high technology services to the Industry and the Society.

NCSR "Demokritos" has contributed significantly in many aspects, such as:

- The advancement and worldwide recognition of the Hellenic research activity;
- The development, diffusion and transfer of high quality know-how to public and private sectors;
- The reversal of high-caliber scientific brain drain;
- The provision of highly qualified research personnel to the Greek academic community as well as to the Greek Industry

Organizational Structure

Institutes

- Institute of Informatics and Telecommunications
- Institute of Biosciences and Applications
- Institute for Nuclear & Radiological Sciences & Technology, Energy & Safety
- Institute for Advanced Materials, Physicochemical Processes, Nanotechnology & Microsystems
- Institute for Nuclear and Particle Physics

The Center hosts a number of large scale research infrastructures and unique facilities and laboratories including:

- Nuclear Reactor
- Tandem Accelerator
- Dioxine Analysis Laboratory
- Solar and other Energy Systems
- Karyotype analysis, and many more.

NCSR "Demokritos" is the venue of the 15th Globelics International Conference

The NCSR "Demokritos" also has a fully equipped Congress Center comprising of rooms, lounges, exhibition spaces, and auditoriums. The Congress Center provides hospitality facilities, spacious parking areas, ATMs for banking transactions, as well as specialised security personnel.

It is situated in Agia Paraskevi, a very pleasant suburb at the foothills of mount Hymettus, 10 km from the center of Athens and just 10 minutes from Eleftherios Venizelos Airport.

National Technical University of Athens

In Greek, NTUA is called "Ethnicon Metsovion Polytechnion".

It was named "Metsovion" to honor the donors and benefactors Nikolaos Stournaris, Eleni Tositsa, Michail Tositsas and Georgios Averof, all from Metsovo, a small town in the region of Epirus.

Founded in 1837, almost at the same time as the modern Greek state, NTUA is the oldest Technical University in Greece.

Initially established by a royal decree "on architectural education", it was a technical school operating on Sundays and holidays which offered courses to those desiring to master in architecture. Its popularity led to the extension of courses and by spring 1840 it began its operation as a regular day school in a building on Piraeus street. The urgent needs for infrastructure to support the ambitious plans of the school led to the 1871 transfer to new buildings on the Patission Street Complex. The construction of the new buildings was initially supported by Nikolaos Stournaris.

Choosing "Prometheus bringing the fire from the gods to the mankind", as its symbol, NTUA never loses sight of the real human needs and dimensions.

The final major reform of the organisation and administration of NTUA took place in 1917. The "Ethnicon Metsovion Politechnion" established five high level engineering schools: Civil, Mechanical & Electrical, Architecture, Chemical and Surveying. Many subsequent changes since 1917, have led to its current form: a prestigious University of Science and Technology, with eight Engineering Schools and a ninth School of Applied Mathematical and Physical Sciences.

The prestigious work of NTUA and its international reputation can be attributed to its well-organized educational and research system, the quality of its staff and students, and the adequacy of its technical infrastructure.

Why Greece?

Greece, or Elláda as it is known in greek, is one of the most historically rich countries in Europe.

Today, it is a modern European country inside the European Union, with a population estimated at just over 11 million people.

Athens is the nation's capital and largest city, followed by Thessaloniki. The official language is Greek, which is spoken by the vast majority of the population. The most common foreign languages Greeks learn are English, German, French, and Russian. English is widely spoken by the younger population, particularly in affluent areas and tourist destinations.

Greeks are inherently proud of their cultural heritage, which dates back thousands of years. The Minoan civilization which flourished on the island of Crete circa 3650 BC is considered as one of the earliest civilizations of its kind. Greece is considered to be the cradle of Western civilization, the birthplace of democracy, Western philosophy, literature, drama, historiography, and the Olympic Games. It was also a major scientific hub, with major contributions to mathematics, physics, medicine, linguistics, and various other fields. Today, Greek literature and theatre are still advanced, although most works are not well known outside the country.

Etiquette and customs

Greeks are known for their hospitality and laid-back attitude, two elements which are crucial in order to understand their etiquette and customs. When meeting someone for the first time, it is customary to either allow someone to introduce you or state your name. Shaking hands firmly is the most appropriate greeting during a first meeting. Good friends and people who have known each other for a very long time may also embrace and kiss each other on both cheeks. Shaking someone's hands while also tapping their shoulder is also quite common amongst male friends.

Did you know?

Greeks do not wave with an open hand. It is considered an insult to show the palm of the hand with the fingers extended.

Becoming familiar with Greek culture will take time and considerable effort, depending on the expat's country of origin.

The relaxed attitude of the Greeks applies to every area of life.

*Did you know?
In Greece, people celebrate the "name day" of the saint who bears their name.*

In general, Greeks will often intrude on your personal space or ask questions that might be considered too personal in other cultures. Such actions are not meant as disrespectful. On the contrary, they are simply considered as a way to approach people and create new relationships without a sense of formality. Most Greeks like to make jokes and ask foreigners about their countries and their experiences in Greece.

If a Greek person invites you to their home, then you should keep in mind that punctuality is not a huge concern. It is a good idea to bring sweets from the local bakery or just a bottle of wine as a small gift. Upon arrival, thanking the host for the invitation and complimenting their home will be appreciated.

During a meal, table manners are almost universally casual. Expect many discussions to happen around the dinner table because meal times are social occasions for the Greeks. Refusing food is considered impolite. If you absolutely have to refuse for one reason or another, try to explain why and the host will understand. Asking for another serving will delight the hosts as it is considered a compliment to their cooking skills. However, portions are usually big and there are often several side dishes on the table at any time. Guests are considered a part of the family as far as the meal time is concerned, which means that they can and should eat or at least try whatever is on the table. Offering to help with setting the table or cleaning the dishes will be appreciated, but your help will not be accepted so do not insist too much.

Public Transport

In Athens, there are 3 metro lines (red, blue, green) which serve the city, 2 suburban railway lines (yellow, dark blue), which connect the city center with the suburbs, trams that connect the city center to the seaside, as well as a lot of buses and trolley buses , and of course taxis.

Tickets can be bought either inside the metro station from the automatic machines and the desks, from kiosks, or the TfA app. More details on the tickets can be found here

Attiko Metro & Tram

The Athens Metro has 3 lines. Today's Athens underground connects important landmarks of the Greek capital, such as the Acropolis, Athens Airport, Port of Piraeus, Central Railway Station and Olympic Stadium, in addition to connecting downtown Athens with the suburbs. At peak hours trains pass by every three minutes. The 3 lines of Athens Tram connects the city center with the southern seaside.

Operating hours are 5:30 a.m. to 00:30 a.m., and every Friday and Saturday night, lines 2 & 3 & tram stay open until 2:30 a.m.

More info on Metro & Tram: here

Buses & Trolleys

City buses and electrical trolley-buses serve Athens and its suburbs. Operating hours vary according to line/day/season, but generally they run between 5:00 a.m. – midnight. There are also five 24-hour lines, 4 airport lines, and 8 Express lines. More info on buses/trolleys on OASA Telematics app & here or by calling 11185 from a Greek phone.

Proastiakos (suburban rail)

The Athens Suburban Railway connects Attica, the surrounding regions and the main cities to the capital's centre, the Airport and Piraeus port. The suburban rail runs daily from 6:00 am until 12 midnight. You can more find information here or by calling 14511 (daily 06:00-23:00)

Usefull applications

OASA Telematics

an app that provides you with all bus timetables and stops , the anticipated arrival time of buses according to the bus stop, and even the exact position of the buses.

Tfa tickets

allows you to buy online tickets of your preference, and activate them on your phone.

Taxis (yellow in Athens, while other colors are preferred elsewhere in Greece) can be a more convenient -although pricier- mean of transportation. On the road if you want to catch a taxi or a bus, you must raise your hand to stop it. Otherwise, you can call a taxi company: +30 21 0277 3600 (Taxiplon), +30 21 0614 3980/4000 (Asteras), 18300 (Taxi Kosmos), 18180 (Radiotaxi Hellas).

You can also use the application Taxibeat to find a taxi or the Uber where you can choose your taxi driver.

Shopping in Athens

The shops and the archaeological sites are located in the same area you, so can easily do both at the same time. Please note that the shops open in the morning and stay open until 9 pm, except on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays when they close at around 2:30. Also, most shops are closed on Sundays. Besides the areas of Plaka and Monastiraki which are well known to travelers for their large variety of tourist shops, the area of central Athens is full of shops which could satisfy every person, in terms of both taste and budget.

There are hundreds of shops on Ermou Street, Athinas Street, Aeolou and all around central Athens area. There are also malls like "Attica", "Athenian Capitol", "The Mall Athens", "Golden Hall", "Avenue", and "Athens Metro Mall". Moreover, there are supermarkets where you can find everything you need, but in case they are closed there are kiosks ('Periptera' in Greek). They are usually open all day long, from early morning up until late night (some of them are open 24/7). All shops accept credit cards, however keep cash handy for smaller purchases.

Walk on the streets of Plaka

Under the shade of the sacred rock of Acropolis lies Europe's perhaps most ancient neighborhood, Plaka. The majesty of its history is deeply carved into the glorious ancient ruins, the byzantine temples and the magnificent renovated neoclassical buildings of our times. With a history of more than 3.500 years, this district welcomes you to explore its narrow streets, called "sokakia", and to discover its secrets and beauties. Today, Plaka is one of the few, if not the only, neighborhood in Athens which is not accessible by car, and maybe this is the reason for which it still succeeds to preserve its unique ambience and picturesqueness.

This place is always full of people of all ages, who during the day enjoy the sightseeing tours, the beautiful colourful shops, and the amazing Greek cuisine at traditional greek restaurants, called "Tavernas", and at night explore its small bars and terraces, where one can listen to traditional greek music, while drinking greek alcoholic beverages with a stunning view of the Acropolis as well as mount Lycabetus and the whole city of Athens.

Cultural Events

As part of the conference activities, the participants are able to participate in one of the highlighted places. Registration and fee are required and only one event per participant can be selected.

Acropolis

Acropolis of Athens is an ancient citadel located on an extremely rocky outcrop above the city of Athens and contains the remains of several ancient buildings of great architectural and historic significance, the most famous being the Parthenon. In Acropolis there are also other important buildings such as the Propylaia, the Erechtheion, the Temple of Athena Nike, the Temple of Rome and Augustus, Acropolis fortification wall and the Old temple of Athena.

The word acropolis comes from the Greek words ἄκρον (akron, "highest point, extremity") and πόλις (polis, "city"). Although there are many other acropolis in Greece, the significance of the Acropolis of Athens is such that it is commonly known as "The Acropolis" without qualification

The Periklean Parthenon was designed by architects Iktinos and Kallikrates, while the sculptor Pheidias supervised the entire building project and conceived the temple's sculptural decoration and chryselephantine statue of Athena. The Parthenon remained unchanged until the fifth century AD, when it was converted into a church dedicated first to Saint Sophia and later to Virgin Mary (Panagia in greek). Under Turkish rule it became a mosque. In 1687, during the siege of the Acropolis by Morozini, the Parthenon was bombarded and largely destroyed. Further serious damage was caused in the early nineteenth century by

Lord Elgin, who looted much of the temple's sculptural decoration and sold it to the British Museum. Conservation and restoration of the Parthenon took place in 1896-1900 and again in 1922-1933. A vast conservation and restoration program of the monuments of the Acropolis, including the Parthenon, is currently under way since 1975 by the Service of Restoration of the Monuments of the Acropolis in collaboration with the First Ephorate of Prehistoric and Classical Antiquities, under the supervision of the Committee for the Conservation of the Monuments of the Acropolis. Panathenaic Stadium

The Panathenaic Stadium (Greek: Παναθηναϊκό Στάδιο) or Kallimarmaro is a multi-purpose stadium in Athens, Greece. It is one of the main historic attractions of Athens, and it is the only stadium in the world built entirely of marble. The stadium was built on the site of a simple racecourse by the Athenian statesman Lykourgos (Lycurgus) c. 330 BC, primarily for the Panathenaic Games. It was rebuilt in marble by Herodes Atticus, an Athenian Roman senator, by 144 AD and had a capacity of 50,000 seats. After the rise of Christianity in the 4th century it was largely abandoned. The stadium was excavated in 1869 and hosted the Zappas Olympics in 1870 and 1875. After being refurbished, it hosted the opening and closing ceremonies of the first modern Olympics in 1896 and was the venue for 4 of the 9 contested sports. It was used for various purposes in the 20th century and was once again used as an Olympic venue in 2004. It is the finishing point for the annual Athens Classic Marathon. It is also the last venue in Greece from where takes place the Olympic flame handover ceremony to the host nation.

"Kallimarmaro" in greek literally means "beautifull marble"

How to get there: Panathenaic Stadium is ideally located in downtown Athens, just 1000m from the "Syntagma", "Acropolis" and "Evangelismos" metro stations.

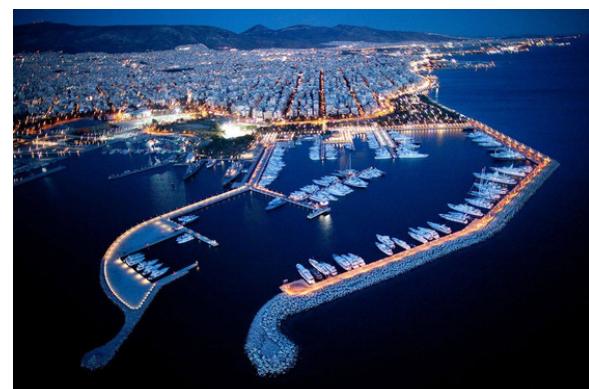

Flisvos Marina

Only 6 km from the centre of Athens, in Paleo Faliro, Flisvos Marina is Greece's first exclusive marina to offer large-scale mooring capacity for mega-yacht owners from Greece and abroad. The marina features 303 berths, more than half of which accommodate luxury yachts of over 35 meters. A commercial complex, that stretches across 3,800 sq.m, features a majestic Mediterranean esplanade lined with fine dining and shopping venues as well as a variety of special events throughout the calendar year for yacht owners and visitors alike.

How to get there: The tram stop "Trocadero" can be used as connection station to the metro station "Neos Kosmos".

Additionally, the bus station of B2 and 550, only 5 minutes away from Flisvos Marina, can be used as connection station to the metro station "Sygrou-Fix". By car/taxi, the nearest metro station "Neo Faliro" is located 6 minutes away from Flisvos Marina.

Stavros Niarchos Foundation Cultural Center (SNFCC)

Stavros Niarchos Foundation Cultural Center (SNFCC) serves as a multifunctional arts, education and entertainment complex, built on the edge of the Faliro Bay. It was built by Stavros Niarchos Foundation and donated to the city of Athens. Education, culture and sustainability, are the SNFCC's three main characteristics, which are essential requirements in order to enhance the potential of the city and its people. The SNFCC was designed by the renowned architectural firm Renzo Piano Building Workshop and includes the new facilities of:

- The National Library of Greece
- The Greek National Opera
- The Stavros Niarchos Park.

Stavros Niarchos Park is a modern Landscape Architecture project designed in accordance with the principles of sustainability, ecosystems and the alternations of a place that is in a constant evolution. It is a welcoming and open space, with plantings and a character which reflects the Mediterranean landscape. Inside the park you can find playgrounds, a circular Labyrinth, a glass-walled lighthouse and a huge garden that extends from the ground to the rooftop. SNFCC hosts a variety of events, that usually differ from week to week, such as music events, sport events and exhibitions for all ages. The Stavros Niarchos Park is open every day between 06.00 and 00.00 and no registration is required in order to visit it. However, a visit to The Greek National Opera and The National Library of Greece, requires special arrangements with the SNFCC. Details about the transportation from and to the SNFCC can be found here

Museums

New Acropolis Museum

Many travellers come to Greece to visit the new Museum of Acropolis, well known for its great collection of findings and the beautiful architecture.

Inaugurated in June 2009, it is the 'flagship' museum for not only Athens, but all of Greece. Archaic and classical findings from the Acropolis site are displayed here. The visitor progresses gradually upward through the building, where on the top floor, the marble frieze that once ran around the top of the Parthenon await. About half of the pieces are originals, while the remainder are faithful plaster copies. The missing pieces were removed by Lord Elgin in 1801 and are now in the British Museum in London.

Historic Review

The hill of Acropolis is probably the most powerful and recognizable image of Greece internationally, with the Parthenon Temple being the official trademark of the country. The monuments of the Acropolis have withstood the ravages of past centuries, both of ancient times and those of the Middle Ages. Until the 17th century, foreign travelers visiting the monuments depicted the classical buildings as being intact.

This remained the case until the middle of the same century, when the Propylaia was blown up while being used as a gunpowder store.

Thirty years later, the Ottoman occupiers dismantled the neighbouring Temple of Athena Nike to use its materials to strengthen the fortification of the Acropolis.

However, the most fatal year for the Acropolis was 1687, when many of the building's parts were blown into the air and fell in heaps around the Hill of the Acropolis, due to an explosion caused by a bomb from the Venetian forces.

Foreign visitors to the Acropolis were searching through the rubble and were taking fragments of the fallen sculptures as their souvenirs. It was in the 19th century that Lord Elgin removed intact architectural sculptures from the frieze, the metopes and the pediments of the building.

Immediately after the founding of the Greek State, discussions began about the construction of an Acropolis Museum on the Hill of the Acropolis.

The new Museum offers all the amenities expected in an international museum of the 21st century.

Permanent Exhibition

Its permanent exhibition consists of: the Gallery of the Slopes of the Acropolis, the Archaic Acropolis Gallery, the Parthenon Gallery, the Propylaia, the temple of Athena Nike, the Erechtheion, the Sanctuary of Artemis Brauronia, the Votives of the Classical & Hellenistic Periods, the Votives of the Roman Period.

The building itself is an architectural gem, designed to echo and pay homage to its classical surroundings. The lower levels of the museum are aligned with the archaeological ruins below, while the top level sits askew to mimic the orientation of the Parthenon above. It's the embodiment of art imitating art. Throughout the museum, scale models (including one made entirely out of Legos) help you visualize just how grand the site once was. A nice way to finish your visit is with a light meal or beverage at the museum's second floor restaurant, which offers a panoramic view of the adjacent Parthenon and city skyline. Also, its large outdoor terrace offers a pleasant experience to enjoy the sunset during warmer months. Additionally, the restaurant stays open late on Friday nights.

The Acropolis Museum is located opposite the Acropolis itself. It is easily reached via the "Acropolis" metro station.

National Archaeological Museum

The National Archaeological Museum of Athens, is one of the most significant museums in Athens, and in the whole country.

It brilliantly displays the style, culture, and sophistication of Ancient Greece and is the best place to increase your knowledge of ancient Athens. It was founded at the end of the 19th century to house and protect antiquities from all over Greece, thus displaying their historical, cultural and artistic value. Its abundant collections, with more than 11,000 exhibits, provide a panorama of Greek civilization from the beginnings of Prehistory to Late Antiquity.

The museum is housed in an imposing neoclassical building of the end of the nineteenth century, which was designed by L. Lange and remodeled by Ernst Ziller. The core of the building was completed in 1889, although several additional sections have been added on to it since. This means that the building itself has a history, as well as the collection it houses. One great story about this museum, is that during the Second World War, the artifacts were removed from the museum and were buried beneath it, in order to protect them from being looted. The exhibition space, with numerous galleries on each floor accounts for a total of 8,000 square metres. It houses five large permanent collections: the Prehistoric Collection, the Sculptures Collection, the Vase and Minor Objects Collection, the Metallurgy Collection, and, finally, the Egyptian and Near Eastern Antiquities Collection.

Goulandris Museum of Cycladic Art

The Museum of Cycladic Art is dedicated to the study and promotion of ancient cultures of the Aegean and Cyprus, with special emphasis on Cycladic Art of the 3rd millennium BC. The Cycladic civilization flourished on the islands of the central Aegean during the Early Bronze Age (3rd millennium BC). The MCA maintains one of the largest and most complete collections of Cycladic antiquities in the world, with representative samples of marble figurines and vases, bronze weapons and tools and pottery of all phases of the Early Cycladic period.

It was founded in 1986, to house the collection of Nicholas and Dolly Goulandris. Since then it has grown in size to accommodate new acquisitions, obtained either through direct purchases or through donations by important collectors and institutions. Don't forget to visit the renovated cafe of the museum which is inspired by the dazzling Greek light and purity of the Cycladic landscape, thus providing a hidden, peaceful oasis in the city centre.

Byzantine Museum

The Byzantine and Christian Museum exhibits mostly religious artifacts of the Early Christian, Byzantine, Medieval, post-Byzantine periods. Also, it acquires, receives, preserves, and conserves records, documents, researches, studies, publishes and raises awareness of byzantine art. The museum has over 25,000 artifacts in its possession.

The artifacts date from between the 3rd and 20th century AD, and their provenance encompasses the entire Greek world, as well as regions in which Hellenism flourished. The size and range of the collections and value of the exhibits make the Museum a veritable treasury of Byzantine and post-Byzantine art and culture

Taste Experiences

The Greek cuisine, which is a Mediterranean one, offers a wide variety of high quality ingredients and highly beneficial combinations which encapsulate the knowledge of centuries, and enjoys a privileged position in the global culture of taste alternatives.

Greek "choriatiki" salad

Common characteristics of Greek cuisine are the excellent raw ingredients and flavours specific to Greece: oregano, thyme, bay leaves, rosemary, lemon, and, of course, olive oil. Fine meat produced by small farmers, fresh fish and seafood, dairy products which are accredited worldwide, healthy fresh vegetables served with brilliant wine, and mouth-watering fruits all serving to create a kaleidoscope of tastes!

In order to experience to the fullest this amazing cuisine, here are some of the Greek people's favorite and most well-known dishes, that everyone who visits Greece must try: dolmadakia (stuffed grape leaves), greek fava dip (yellow split pea puree), feta, greek salad, ntakos, pita gyros, moussaka, pastitsio, saganaki (fried cheese), spanakopita (spinach pie), tzatziki and yemista.

And what about the Greek sweets and desserts? There are also a lot traditional and unique Greek desserts that one has to taste during his visit. All of them are delicious, but the most traditional ones are: lukumades (honey puffs), portokalopita (orange cake), greek baklava, galaktoboureko, diples (sweet fried bow knots), halvas (semolina pudding), and melomakarona (Honey & Spice Cookies) and kourabiedes (Walnut Sugar Cookies), which are served only during the Christmas period.

As far as coffee is concerned, coffee lovers will be more than pleased during their stay, since coffee is a vital part of the Greek culture (the reason country is full with local cafés!). It is recommended to try all the unique coffees offered in Greece, like: the traditional Greek coffee, the frappé, the freddo cappuccino and the freddo espresso (the last three are cold coffees).

Last but not least, Greece offers a wide variety of alcoholic beverages, with the most representative examples being: tsipouro, ouzo, retsina, wines and beers.

Greek lukumades

After having briefly presented the Greek eating and drinking culture, here is a list of some of the most beautiful places in Athens, in which one can experience the Greek cuisine, foods and drinks. Consider drinking your coffee a view, having lunch in the "sokakia" (little roads) of Plaka, or enjoying a cocktail on a roof garden.

What about a small excursion?

Want to discover a little bit of Greece? We have a few one or two - day trips suggestions for you!

Aegina

Aegina island is only a breath away from the port of Pireus, 35 minutes by flying dolphin and 60 minutes by the ferry boat (Tip: if you are not getting along with sea travelling you should probably avoid the flying dolphin). The town of Aegina does not have the usual architecture with the white - blue houses but the beautiful beaches, the romantic walks at the port and the combination of sea and mountain will reward you. You can go swimming, trekking, hiking, wind-surfing, water skiing or take a water taxi for a tour around the island and relax. You can also visit the Archaeological museum of Aegina, the archaeological site of Kolona, the Temple of Aphaia, the Temple of Apollo and the Monastery of Agios Nektarios. Don't forget to taste the famous pistachios! Look for one of the shops with the traditional pistachio products and taste the island 's little treasure. From the center of Athens you will only need one hour and a half to get to Aegina.

Sounio

Cape Sounion is the southernmost tip of Attica, a strategic point thanks to which Athens emerged as a leading power in the 5th century BC. Explore the archaeological site of Sounio: the fortress' wall that extends to a length of about 400m on the north and east sides and the settlement that extends on the inside of the fortress, the sanctuary of Poseidon and the sanctuary of Athena at Sounion. Only one hour and a half from Athens' city center by car.

Epidaurus

Epidaurus is mainly known for the Great Theatre and the little theatre of Ancient Epidaurus.

Among all the ancient Greek theaters, Epidaurus theater is the most beautiful and the most well preserved one. Destined for the fun of the patients of Asklepieio, it had a capacity of 13,000 spectators. It was divided into two parts: A 21 row part with seats, aimed for the citizens and a 34-row part of seats, aimed for the priests and rulers. The superb acoustics as well as the very well preserved construction, contributed to the creation of Epidaurus Festival S.A., an institution that contributed to the cultural revival of the theater. Great actors and the famous soprano Maria Kallas have given a performance here.

The small theater of Ancient Epidaurus was established in the Acropolis of the ancient city of Epidaurus at the South-Western slope, before the period of Asklepios. It was used mainly for the events of the Dionysian cult, so it was dedicated to the god Dionysus. From the dedicatory inscriptions, it can be concluded that the construction of the thereat was held during the 4th century, with the sponsorship of prominent rulers and upper class people. A remarkable characteristic of the theater are the inscriptions, which consist of a real-living museum. This is why it is called "the theater that speaks". After 23 centuries of silence, the excavation began in 1971

It will take you two hours to get to Epidaurus from Athens by car. If you have some time stop at the Isthmus or Corinth to watch the boats that are sailing through the canal.

Delphi

At the foot of Mount Parnassos, within the angle formed by the twin rocks of the Phaedriades, lies the Pan-Hellenic sanctuary of Delphi, which had the most famous oracle of ancient Greece. Delphi is famous as the ancient sanctuary that grew rich as the seat of Pythia, the oracle consulted about important decisions throughout the ancient classical world. Moreover, the Greeks considered Delphi the navel (or centre) of the world, as represented by the stone monument known as the Omphalos of Delphi.

Admission Fee Full: 12€, Reduced: 6€

Don't forget to visit the Ancient Theater of Delphi and the Delphi Archeological Museum. You can get to Delphi from Athens in two and a half hours by car.

Monemvasia

The old town of Monemvasia is a perfectly preserved medieval settlement still inhabited, a world cultural heritage monument and a major attraction for every traveler in the Peloponnese. Monuments and churches are scattered throughout the old town. An important archaeological collection is housed in the old mosque in the Square of Elkomenos Christos.

At the other end of the causeway on the mainland is the new town of Monemvasia. Along the coast to the south is the settlement of Nomia.

Neighbouring Aghios Ioannis is recommended for those who would like to try authentic local dishes. Both within and around Monemvasia there are a number of excellent beaches. Noteworthy sights further inland include the watermill at Talanta and the Velies Folklore Museum.

You need four hours to get to Monemvasia, so a two - day trip is recommended.
